Unsatisfactory Methods. WASHINGTON BUREAU THE OMARA BEE.

513 FOURTEENTH STREET, WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 8. Cavalrymen are considerably dissatisfied with the rules which had governed them this year at the shooting ranges. They say that it is unfair to compare cavalrymen with infantry, and compel them to drop their carbines and take up the rifle with which they are not presumed to be as familiar as are the infantry. It is believed that something will be done to remedy this evident wrong. The practice has a tendency to make the cavalrymen distrustful of his weapon, as the carbine has been invariably thrown aside at the shooting ranges, and the rifle substituted This would indicate that at least those who govern the practice of shooting do not regard the carbine as effective as the rifle. The cavalrymen believe they ought to be permitted to shoot with the weapon which is permanently assigned to them for warfare It is stated at the war department that in future more attention is to be paid to practice which has been permitted to lag for many years. A better weapon is to be procured and there are to be inducements offered to bring the men up to scientific acquirements. Rifles are also to be adopted which will carry less weight in lead.

OFFICERS FOR THE COLLEGES. Schator Manderson has made arrangement to have called up in the senate, the first of next week, his bill which passed the house this week (with an amendment), providing for the assignment of sixty instead of forty. as at present, army and navy officers for military and navy instructions at the colleges throughout the country. He says the senate will promptly concur in the house amendment, and he very gladly accepts the amendment of the house, which includes navy with army officers. Senator Manderson intends to be at Columbus, O., three or four days next week, in attendance on the national encampment of the G. A. R.

MR. LIND ON RETALIATION. Representative Lind, the Swedish member for New Ulm, Minn., stated in the house to-day very clearly his reasons for opposing the passage of the Wilson retaliation bill. Mr. Lind quoted from authorities on international law showing when retaliation should be in-dulged in and how far it should extend. He urged that such a retainatory policy as that contemplated would work incalculable harm to the farming interests of the northwest, and besides is designed to go much further than the Canadians have gone. He thought that the president had ample power to en-force American rights without embarrassing American commerce. Then Mr. Lind paid his respects to William L. Scott of Pennsyl-vania, whom he designated as the president's mouthpiece.

Scott," said Mr. Lind, "has an ur doubted right to be a stockholder and di-rector in the Canadian Pacific railroad, just as the Canadians have and exercise the right to hold stock in American railroads, but when he comes on this floor in that ca-pacity and advocates a bill for the benefit of his own pocket it is time to call a halt."

Mr. Lind explained that the enforcement of retaliation such as was contemplated while seriously embarrassing the roads con necting the northwest with the eastern sea board by way of the "Soo" canal, would be highly beneficial to the Canadian Pacific, in which Mr. Scott is a representative stock-holder and director. The speech attracted the most profound attention from the entire house. Mr. Scott was absent, so that he could not reply. The bill was subsequently passed by a vote of 176 to 4. The four votes in the negative were cast by Messrs. Lind Bayne, Daisell, and White of New York. SENATOR INGALLS' GENTILITY.

It is very seldom that a white man shows any consideration for colored people in Wash-ington. There are between seventy and eighty thousand Africans in the national capital, and the great body of the white population are from Maryland, Virginia and Carolina families. Ex-siave owners have not a very high regard for people in black skins even to this day, and only strangers in Washington show very much consideration for the colored people. White men sit in street cars by the hour and permit colored women to stand without any regard for them, but as soon as a white woman enters the car the white men rise up as one and proffer their seats. The other day a bob-tail street car going to the capitol became very crowded. Three or four men were standing in the aisle, while about a dozen were sitting. Finally a colored woman entered, and placing her basket on the floor, caught onto one o the hold-straps and poised herself to stand till the end of her journey was reached. A very tall, slender man, with thick eyeglasses and a small gray mustache, was sitting up at the end of the car, and immediately that he saw the colored woman standing he arose and, touching the brim of his hat, said modestly and in low tones:

'Madame, take my seat, wont you?" The colored woman stammered, looked as astonished, thanked the gentleman and sat down. The man who had given up his seat caught hold of the strap and stood till the capitol was reached. No one in the car seemed to know him, and he evidently did not know any of the passengers. The act of the man, however, attracted considerable attraction. tention, because it was very unusual, and caused some of the passengers to make in-quiry. Two or three days afterwards one of the passengers, a stranger, was sitting in the gallery of the senate with his wife, who was also on the street car at the time of the inc. dent, and in looking out over the chamber he pointed his finger and exclaimed: "There sits the man who gave his seat to the colored woman in the street car. CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS

The House Passes the Retaliation Bill After a Long Debate.

VOTE PRACTICALLY UNANIMOUS.

Only Four of the Members Willing to Place Themselves on Record as Opposed to the Measure.

House.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 .- The house this morning resumed consideration of the retaliation bill and was addressed by Mr. White of New York, who declared for retaliation such as would retaliate upon the enemy and not upon the people of the United States. He believed that the first section of the bill would inure to the benefit of the Dominion of Canada and to the permanent injury of the commerce of the country and of American labor. The stoppage of the shipment of freight in bond would not hurt a single Canadian fisherman who had been guilty of wrong, but would hurt the people of the western provinces who had not mitted any grievances. And while the province of Manitoba must pay for the trans-fer of its freight, the American workingmen would lose $3,250,000 a year if the provisions of the bill were carried into effect. The question came to him whether, under his oath, he should vote for the measure, which he believed to be directly detrimental to the laboring men of his district. In behalf of what had been characterized by the gentle man from Illinois (Cannon) as beating a gong and furnishing another mallet for the purpose, he would never vote for put-ting a mallet in the hands of any man to beat a Chinese gong, who, as he struck the gong, necessarily hit the heads of American workmen and American enterprise. He believed the bill was unjust, illogical and wrong, and if he voted alone (as he probably would), he would vote against the bill. Mr. White thought that if the president prevented Can adian fish from coming into this country he would strike the "Blue Noses" where it hurt. He favored retaliation that would hurt somebody. Proceeding to speak of the competition existing between the American and Canadian trunk lines of railroads, he was interrupted by Mr. O'Neill of Pennsylvania with the question as to whether he could not devise an amendment to the inter-state commerce act which would bring the Canadian raitroads under its provisions. Mr. White admitted to the justice of his course, which Mr. Wilson of Minnesota declared would turn the farmers of the northwest over to the tender mercies of Wall street.

Mr. Wilson asserted that a person who would precipitate war without imperative necessity, and without exhausting every honorable means to avoid it, would merit and all down upon himself the execration of every just and right-minded man. He then analyzed the acts of 1887 to support his assertion that every mischief and every injury which it is charged would result to the peoole of the northwest from the enactment of the pending bill would have resulted to them by the enforcement of the act of 1887. That act authorized the president to prohibit the introduction of Canadian goods. Did any-one suppose that the Canadian government would not retaliate in kind ! Mr. Lind of Minnesota inquired whether his colleague did not suppose that under the the pending bill the Canadians would not pay the United States back with its own coin. Mr. Wilson replied that the bill did not Mr. Wison replied that the bill did not make any such thing necessary. The pend-ing bill was particularly guarded so as not to destroy the business of the northwest, as the act of 1887 would have done. The gentlemen on the other side, with one exception, while on the other side, with one exception, while denouncing the pending bill, had declared their intention of voting for it. This showed a low state of morals or lack of independence unbecoming to men who ventured to charge the president with pusilianimity.

Continuing, Mr. Wilson said that should war be declared, which God forbid, a gunboat of Great Britain would scarcely have time to reach our shore before Canada would be a part of the United States. He thought that there would be no war, but should the queen of England, forgetting the lessons to her ancestors in the past, aim or discharge at the United States one unfriendly gun from one of her gunboats, he predicted that the echo which it would awaken would not cease to reverberate before Grover Cleveland, president of the greatest republic on earth, would salute Charles Stewart Parnell as president of the youngest republic on earth.
[Applause on the democratic side].

Mr. Lind of Minnesota said that if the pending bill became a law the president could, by a single stroke of his pen, reduce the value of 60,000,000 bushels of Minnesota and Dakota wheat 7 cents a bushel. He ould enhance the exactions of the north western railroads at least 25 per cent could cripple the enterprising men of the northwest, and it was not on account of selfish reasons that he would vote against the bill. He would vote against it because he believed that it was conceived for im-proper purposes. It was uncalled for, wrong in theory and an unworthy exponent of the power, dignity and honor of American people. The discussion was further continued by Messrs. O'Neill, of Missouri and Tarsney, of Michigan.

Mr. Cockran, of New York, said that the address on the other side, which had fur-nished the keynote of the discussion, had been the able speech of the gentleman from Illinois (Hill). To that gentleman, and to Illinois (Hill) him alone, was due the credit of lifting the discussion to a high level in the plane of parliamentary proceedure. But he regretted that while the speech was eloquent it lacked that element of candor and fairness which would have made it one of the greatest productions of this session. The gentleman ductions of this session. The gentleman from Illinois had charged that the repre sentatives of the government in the treaty negotiations with o distinct act of betrasa of American rights, and had said that there was an unwritten postscript to the treaty and that the postscript was an agreement between Secretary Bayard and the Canadian minister. He said that the introduction of the Mills bill and the vote that by which it was passed were part of the conspiracy of betrayal, secretly entered into and carried out with dissimulation and alnost with treason. To charge the president with having negotiated the treaty and trying to hoodwink the people into a belief that it was for one purpose, while the Canadians were told that it was for another; with treat ing the United States with dissimulation and extending confidence with a Canadian envoy with letting the people learn the true Cha acter of the treaty from declarations in the Canadian parliament—this was to charge the president with something graver than treason, with a crime which had no paral-lel in the history of the executive office of the United States. There were men on the democratic side who would be the last in the world to countenance the sale of American interests or American nity to the British government. The admin-istration of President Cleveland, the motives sincerity. [Significant applause on the publican side.] its sincerity.

which prompted his official acts, need no ex-planation to the country. [Democratic ap-plause.] The gentleman from Illinois knew that they needed no explanation, because the people believe them to have been prompted by patriotism and inspired by love of country. He regarded that applause with pleasure. He knew to what it referred, and he adopted the declaration of the gentleman from Missouri (O'Neill), that the message was a campaign document, and a great one, because is appealed to the intelligence and patriotism of the people. [Democratic applause,]
The debate was continued by Messrs,
Bayne, McAdoo, McMillen, Farquhar and Seney.

Mr. Henderson, of Iowa, charged the president with dishonesty in sending in his message. He was trifling with the American people. American citizens—15,000 fishermen sage. He was trifling with the American people. American citizens—15,000 fishermen—had been outraged. They asked that their enemies be treated in the same way as they had been treated. The present war head of this nation stood paralyzed and silent. Ears would protrude through the hide. Was Grover Cleveland the great type of American citizenship! God have mercy on the country. He (Henderson) would not touch upon that moral type. He never had. The curtain which had been drawn so closely around this moral type by eloquent and gifted men he would not raise his hand to touch. He would be kind. But he challenged the democrats to tear down the curtain around the life of the republican candidate. Benjamin Harrison, [Applause on republican side.] It would stand inspection in public and private. Grover Cleveland might be the democratic type of American morals and American citizenship, but he (Henderson) would not point the young men of America to him as a model. Mr. Caruth of Kentucky said that anyone listening to Mr. Henderson would imagine that outrages on American fishermen were of recent date, instead of happening during the republican administrations.

> AMUSEMENTS. "Keep It Dark."

This play has become one of the recognized successes of more recent farce comedy It is a very funny piece of work, and is in terpreted by an exceptionally talented company of comedians and vocalists, with a bevy of pretty girls for the different musical num bers which are thickly strewn throughout the comedy. The piece is refined and per fectly clean, and can be enjoyed by the most cultured audience. It has the merit of being built up out of entirely new material, while all the music is very bright and catchy. The star of "Keep It Dark" is Mr. W. T. Bryant who is known as "an original comedian," and his clever impersonation of Jasper Vase line, the liver-pad vender, has added no little to his fame. "Keep It Dark" is in three acts, and will keep the audience in one con-tinuous laugh. Friday and Saturday, Sep-tember 14 and 15, are the dates.

He was followed by A. E. Cady, of St. Paul. Mr. Cady spoke for twenty minutes and delivered one of the soundest and most eloquent speeches the people of Grand Island have had the pleusure of hearing. Next came Hon, John L. Web-ster, of Omaha, who was listened to with rapt attention for thirty minutes, and was repeatedly interrupted with applause. Those who were not fortunate enough get a seat in the house were not be denied the pleasure of listening to John M. Thurston and he was called outside where e addressed them for an hour and a quarter. At the conclusion of Mr. Webster's speech Brad Slaughter requested all those who voted for Harrison in 1-40 to take a seat on the platform. Seven veterans responded to the call and were heartly cheered as they marched down the arsie. At this point the audience called for Thurston and he res-ponded with one of his "big speeches." It is needless to say that he was listened to with minute attention and was repeatedly ap-plauded. Every allusion to Blaine, Logan, Sheridan, Grant or Thayer was the occasion for uproarous applause. The streets were gayly decorated with flags and buiting and gayly decorated with flags and buntu lighted at night with Chinese lanterns.

Union Labor Rally.

McCook, Neb., Sept. 8.-(Special Telegram o THE BEE. ]-Early this morning the staunch supporters of Streeter and Cunningham began to assemble on the streets in full armor, and frequently in knots on the corners where some admired exhorter was handling the subject of "Capital vs Labor" in most cases with more force than elegance. In the forenoon the assemblage gathered at the dance pavillion and listened to an ad-dress by Colonel Jesse Harper, of Danville, Ills. In the evening about two hundred torch bearers, with numerous transparancies and two bands paraded the streets and the ceremonies concluded with a meeting at the opera house at night.

Weeping Water Wants It.

THE BEE. |- The people of Weeping Water have circulated a petition for the removal of the county seat from this place, and have secured 2598 names. The petition was presented to the commissioners at their last session and the election will be held with the general election. It is generally conceded that enough votes will be secured to put the county seat on wheels but when the vote for location comes up, every little town in the county will probably vote for itself and Plattsmouth will still retain the plum.

FISHING VESSELS WRECKED. Several of Them Engulfed During A

Storm Near Iceland. GLOUCE STEEL, Mass., Sept. b .- Captain Ryan, of the schoener A. D. Storey, which arrived from Iceland last night, reports great destruction among the fishing fleet during April on the south coast of Iceland a terrible storm which came up engulfed six vessels and their crews. One other vessel lost her captain and three men. As near as could be ascertained the number lost was 137. Many of the vessels were so badly damaged that they had to be abandoned. Three hundred men were left in a destitute condition in Ice-land until the steamer carried them away. They endured many hardships while there, the supply of food being limited. American vessels have done fairly and have suffered no serious mishaps.

A Boy Away From Home. Rainh Creighton, a boy of six years old was sent to Omaha from York. He was to have been met at the depot upon his arrival by a lady, who failed to appear. The police took Ralph in hand, and he spent the night on a bunk in the police court. Yesterday morning he was turned over to Mrs. Clark of the Women's Christian Aid Society. Last night his people telephoned in from York to the police asking if he had been put on train and sent home. They replied that Mra. Clark had taken charge of him, and that he would be well taken care of until someone was sent after him. Graduates Will Meet. An informal meeting of the alumni of the University of Illinois will be held at the parlors of the Windsor hotel, Lincoln, September 12 at 7 p. m.
